GREEN...

Corinthian Ground Transportation Services, from its inception, has taken multiple actions to reduce the impact of our vehicles upon the environment by establishing a comprehensive program to address both global warming and the climate change issue. The Corinthian plan is based upon the belief that the potential risks presented by increased global warming are so great that it is preferable to take immediate, decisive action by offering eco-friendly alternative fuel vehicles now, rather than waiting for scientific research and technological improvements to provide other alternatives to reverse the effects of climate change.

Our fleet currently includes several vehicles utilizing liquid propane injection (LPI), which provides the balance of fuel economy, performance and emissions meeting EPA and CARB emission requirements.

We have introduced several varied comprehensive and customized strategies to our operation that will, over the next several years, result in a significant reduction of the company's energy consumption as well as a dramatic reduction in our overall carbon footprint.

We are actively involved in:

- Carbon emissions inventory assessment
- Emissions goal setting
- Carbon offsetting
- Alternative fuel vehicles

We are members of the ETDC (Electronic Transportation Development Center), a non profit support center for the development of electric, natural gas, biodiesel and solar fueled vehicles.

Corinthian has been an example to the transportation industry, demonstrating that transportation providers can be the solution to taking thousands of vehicles off the road.
